Course

Get ready for an exciting and informative spy series! Criminal defense attorney, Stephen Singer, breaks down the cases. Learn about the Rosenbergs, who were executed as the "Atom Bomb" spies who gave our greatest secret to the Russians. But were they guilty? Were they both guilty? Did they deserve the electric chair?

Learn about Jonathan Pollard who was born in Texas and ended up spying against us for the State of Israel. Explore the work of Aldrich Ames, a member of the C.I.A., who sold himself to the Russians. But was it for money or ego? He was an alcoholic and drug user who should have been caught many times.

Let's not forget about Alfred Dreyfus. When a torn-up letter, retrieved from the German embassy, revealed a mole in the French Army who was selling secrets to the Germans, Dreyfus was blamed, primarily because he was Jewish.

Mata Hari's name has come down to us throughout the twentieth century as one of the most famous female spies in history. But was she? As a divorced woman with no particular skills except exotic dancing, she created a wanton image that permitted her access to the bedrooms of many pivotal figures during World War I.
